

NORFOLK, VIRGINIA

MEETING OF COUNCIL

TUESDAY JANUARY 27, 2026

Mayor Kenneth Cooper Alexander, called the meeting to order at 4:00 p.m., with the following members present: Mr. Carlos J. Clanton, Mrs. Courtney R. Doyle, Mrs. Mamie B. Johnson, Mr. Jeremy D. McGee, Mr. John E. Paige, Mr. Thomas R. Smigiel Jr., and Vice Mayor Martin A. Thomas, Jr.

Introduction and Agenda Overview

City Manager Roberts opened the work session of the Norfolk City Council and outlined the agenda.

Utility Billing Update

Deputy City Manager Doug Beaver, accompanied by Assistant Director of Utilities, Mary Keough, and Water Services Customer Service Manager, Trinette Hodges, addressed the Council to provide an update on recent extended water utility billing cycles.

Mr. Beaver presented data showing a significant increase in the average billing cycle length over the past two months, with some cycles extending to 45-48 days instead of the standard 30. He identified three main drivers for this increase. The first was weather, as exceptionally hot, cold, or rainy days led to higher absenteeism among meter readers. The second was staffing shortages within the city's contractor, Alexander's Contract Services (ACS), which operated with only 10 readers instead of the 14 to 16 required to cover the city's 20 monthly reading cycles. The third was meter accessibility issues, such as flooded meter boxes after heavy rainfall, which impeded the readers' work. He noted that neighboring municipalities like Virginia Beach, which also uses ACS, experienced similar delays.

In response to these extended cycles, the city took several actions to inform the public. Information explaining the contractor issues and the resulting longer billing periods was included directly on the Hampton Roads Utility Billing System (HRUBS) bills. A similar notice was posted on the city's utilities webpage. The department also engaged with local media to explain the situation to a broader audience, with Assistant Director Mary Keough giving an interview and Councilman Clanton also participating.

Mr. Beaver explained the financial impact on customers, noting that a longer cycle led to bills that were approximately 50% higher than normal, causing concern for many residents. He clarified that water and wastewater charges are volume-based, so customers are only billed for what they consume. While fixed-rate charges for refuse and stormwater are also included, the total amount paid over a full year remains the same, just distributed over fewer bills. To mitigate the financial strain, the city encouraged residents to contact customer service for payment assistance. Since November 1st, the city has granted over 1,100-time extensions and established 360 monthly installment payment plans. Mr. Beaver cited a recent example where a resident with a nearly $600 balance was placed on a 12-month, $50-per-month payment plan, and a leak check was performed on the property.

Regarding corrective actions, Mr. Beaver reported that ACS increased its minimum pay and instituted incentive programs for its readers, which has already led to an increase in their staffing levels. ACS also elevated its operational oversight by assigning an East Coast regional manager and involving its Chief Operating Officer. The Utilities Department is enforcing contract penalties for misreads, which amounted to approximately $8,700 in the previous month. Mr. Beaver shared that his own bill cycle had decreased from 49 to 39 days, indicating a positive trend. Staff anticipate the return to a normal billing cycle by the beginning of March.

For a long-term solution, Mr. Beaver reminded the Council of the Advanced Metering Infrastructure (AMI) project previously briefed in July. This four-year initiative will upgrade to all 70,000 meters in the city. A pilot program is set to launch next month, installing 700 new meters in Downtown Norfolk, East Beach, and Southeast Norfolk. Residents will be notified via mailers and door hangers as the project progresses through different neighborhoods. As AMI technology is deployed, the city's reliance on manual meter reading will decrease.

Council Discussion

Following the presentation, Councilman Smigiel thanked Mr. Beaver for the proactive communication and inquired whether late fees would be waived for customers affected by the billing delays who did not request an extension. Ms. Hodges responded that such cases are handled on a case-by-case basis when customers reach out, but the city could discuss a more automatic approach.

Councilman McGee expressed his appreciation for the proactive response but remained troubled by the contractor's staffing issues, suggesting that recruiting 15 people should not be an insurmountable challenge. He questioned the terms of the city's five-year contract with ACS, which began in October 2022 and is currently in its third one-year renewal period, ending in October 2027. He asked if the contract included penalties for understaffing. Mr. Beaver stated that the penalties were primarily for misreads, and the city's recourse for staffing issues had been to demand increased oversight and better pay from the contractor. He committed to re-examining the contract for other potential enforcement mechanisms. Councilwoman Johnson emphasized the need to ensure future contracts contain stronger provisions to protect the city and its residents and suggested that the city should be prepared to find a new vendor if ACS cannot meet its obligations.

Councilman Paige asked for clarification on what happens to the penalty funds collected from the contractor. Ms. Hodges explained that the penalties, which can be around $10,000 per month against ACS's roughly $70,000 monthly invoice, are deducted directly from the payment made to ACS. Councilman Paige suggested that Council consider directing these penalty funds into a program to assist residents struggling with high water bills. He also questioned the contract renewal process, asking if the city could exit the contract sooner. Mr. Beaver clarified the contract structure consists of a one-year base with four one-year renewal options. He reiterated that as the AMI project ramps up, the reliance on ACS will diminish, mitigating the impact of their performance issues.

Councilman Clanton sought to understand the cost savings associated with the AMI transition. Mr. Beaver stated that he would provide a report on the sundown of manual meter reading and the associated cost savings from the AMI project. Councilman Clanton noted the importance of communicating to residents that a long-term solution is in progress. The conversation then shifted to the overall affordability of the utility bill. Councilman Smigiel suggested a review of the automatic rate increases built into the HRUBS bill, questioning if they are all still necessary and whether savings could be found to ease the financial burden on residents.

Councilman Smigiel asked for clarification on the daily workload for meter readers. Mr. Beaver confirmed that with a full staff of 15 readers working over 20 business days (cycles), each reader would be responsible for approximately 225 reads per day. He stated that ACS has a minimum requirement of 200 reads per reader per day, with incentives offered to exceed that number.

Public Safety and Crime Statistics Update

Police Chief Mark Talbot began his presentation by stating that 2025, in terms of violence, has been one of the safest in 40 years, representing significant progress for the city. He attributed this success to effective strategies and the strong performance of his team. Chief Talbot acknowledged the valuable contributions of partner organizations, including violence interrupters, and thanked Council and other city departments for their support.

Chief Talbot presented key crime statistics, noting a 30% decrease in homicides in the last year, a 24% reduction in non-fatal shootings, an 11% drop in violent crime, and a 17% decline in property crime. The total crime rate fell by 16% compared to the previous year and showed a 37% reduction from 2020.

Chief Talbot focused on gun violence, a significant challenge. Homicides involving a firearm were down 26% from the prior year and 50% from 2020. Non-fatal shootings decreased by 5% from 2023 and 64% from 2020. He also reported that the department's clearance rates for closing cases exceeded the national average. Mayor Alexander asked Chief Talbot to clarify the meaning of "clearance rate." Chief Talbot stated the "clearance rate" refers to the rate of closing cases, typically through an arrest or other resolution that brings an offender to justice.

Technology and Recruitment Efforts

The discussion shifted to the city's technology infrastructure and police recruitment. Chief Talbot reported that the Real-Time Crime Center currently operates 175 Flock cameras and 65 Fusus-linked cameras, with a total of 15 LVT (Live-View Technology) units deployed. The goal to integrate 3,000 cameras was met, with 342 registered cameras across the city. He affirmed that this technology is integral to their core policing strategy. He also updated on the E911 call center, stating that it has stabilized since the police department took it over two years ago. Call answer times have improved significantly, with emergency call answer times being 17 seconds faster by the end of the previous year.

Staffing was a central topic. Chief Talbot noted that E911 staffing has increased, with approximately 20 new employees hired last year, achieving the highest retention rate since 2020 at 76%. Police department applications saw a 20% increase, rising from 567 in 2024 to 679 in 2025. Hiring also rose from 41 to 60 officers during that period. A significant challenge identified was competition from federal employment opportunities, which offer substantial bonuses.

City Manager Roberts elaborated on the city's response to these recruitment and retention challenges. He outlined several initiatives under review: a retention bonus program, a take-home car program, addressing pay compression for officer and MPO levels in the upcoming budget, and bonuses for lateral hires. Mr. Roberts announced a key staffing change to support these efforts. He assigned Ms. Pamela Marino, Assistant Director of Budget & Management, to lead a new team in the Human Resources Department focused specifically on recruitment and retention, with a primary goal of shortening the employee onboarding time. He concluded by commending Chief Talbot, MPO Lance Roberson, and Officer Joe Brown for their dedication and commitment.

Council Discussion

Mayor Kenneth Cooper Alexander opened the floor for questions. Councilman Smigiel raised concerns about federal agencies like ICE recruiting local officers with large bonuses, impacting police forces in the region. Mr. Roberts confirmed this concern had been expressed to Congress. Mr. Beaver commended Chief Talbot's leadership and noted a positive change in officer morale.

Councilwoman Mamie Johnson expressed her appreciation for the department and highlighted the success of a program allowing citizens to link personal cameras to the city's network.

Councilman Clanton asked how the 175 Flock camera locations are determined. Chief Talbot explained placement is data-driven to maximize crime prevention effectiveness. He also clarified that the Flock camera system captures license plate data, which is stored according to state law, and the department audits its use of the technology.

Councilman Paige expressed gratitude for the positive crime data but also voiced disappointment about a recent unspecified incident. He cautioned against letting one event overshadow progress. He suggested that improved trauma care might contribute to lower homicide statistics, as some victims now survive attacks that would have been fatal in the past. He acknowledged the role of former offenders who now cooperate with law enforcement and urged mindfulness of the families of victims. Regarding federal recruitment, he suggested developing a program in high schools to create a pipeline of local students into the police force.

Councilman Smigiel responded to Councilman Paige, noting that while national homicide rates are down, Norfolk's reduction to its lowest rate since 1985 appears particularly significant and reflects the city's specific efforts. Councilman Paige clarified he was urging a comprehensive look at all contributing factors.

Councilwoman Doyle commended the department's work and regular data reporting. She shared that Officer Dunthorn proudly reports the low homicide rate at civic league meetings, reflecting pride within the department. She also praised the responsiveness of the non-emergency 911 line.
